

Mingo Mine Fight Heard In U. S. Court

Charges Made by Operators and Workers in Appeal
From Recent Injunction
Suspending Check-Offs

Strike Threat Alleged

Right of Owners to Hire Non-Union Men Asserted and Lawyer Says They're Shot

CHICAGO, Nov. 16.—The fight between the miners and operators of Mingo County, W. Va., was carried into the United States Circuit Court of Appeals here to-day, when charges and counter charges were hurled back and forth in the appeal hearing from the injunction suspending the check-off recently issued by Judge A. B. Anderson in Indianapolis.

Charges that the United Mine Workers of America had entered an agreement in 1898 with the mine operators of the central competitive field to destroy the competition of West Virginia and other fields were met with a charge that the West Virginia operators were trying to stir up trouble which would give them a greater market and higher prices.

Union Upholds Check-Off
The check-off used to collect union dues and assessments was declared a legal procedure by William A. Glasgow, counsel for the union, but he asserted his willingness to submit to an injunction enjoining any illegal objects for which the check-off was used. Counsel for the operators, Z. T. Vonnerson, of Huntington, W. Va., declared the money derived from the check-off extended union activities and therefore furthered the alleged conspiracy.

He upheld the right of the operators to hire only non-union men, who, he said, were shot down with rifles purchased by union money and in the hands of union men. He reviewed the disturbances of the West Virginia field, charging that $2,567,000 had been expended in that district by the international and local unions. He also charged that since 1912 the union had become a "socialistic organization."

Trouble Making Alleged
Replying to the operators' charges Mr. Glasgow declared the coal operators had placed deputy sheriffs in their line, and charged the operators with attempting to stir up trouble in union fields.

"If they can stir up trouble in the union fields," he said, "what do you think would be the demand for coal from them and what price would they get?"

"Is that a threat of a strike?" demanded A. M. Belcher, counsel for the operators.

"I'm not saying," Mr. Glasgow replied. "But if a contract between the operators and the union miners is broken, I don't see how they can be prevented from laying down their picks."

The court gave no indication of when it would render a decision. Meanwhile, Judge Anderson's injunction stands suspended, since his injunction was merely temporary. The whole case will later be appealed for permanent decision.

Compel Incorporation Of Unions, Says Barr

President of National Founders' Association Makes Charges of Radicalism for Revenue

William H. Barr, president of the National Founders' Association, said yesterday at the annual convention at the Hotel Astor that as unionism had degenerated in many cases to radicalism for revenue only, trade unions should be compelled to incorporate so as to be amenable to the law.

"Surely," he said, "there can be no objection to any organization bringing itself definitely within the law and assuming both moral and financial responsibility. The difficulty seems to be that militant unionism desires to set itself up as an independent organization, immune to the breaking of all laws and wholly without recognition of its patriotic duty to the nation which tolerates its baneful activities."

Union labor had dominated preceding Congresses, he said, but at present the Senate was besought for class legislation by the agricultural interests, a situation which he regarded as about as undesirable as that brought about by the labor influence of last years.

He spoke of the threatened railroad strike and the necessity of taking the railroads out of politics. Other speakers were Governor H. J. Allen, of Kansas; M. W. Alexander, A. C. Davis and L. Greener.

Coast Guards Talk by Radio
